Colombia: One of the fastest growing Latin American economies

Colombia is the fifth largest country and the fourth largest economy in Latin America. Colombia's industrialized economy benefits from diverse agricultural and natural resources.

The increased security combined with sound fiscal practices has allowed Colombia to become one of the more stable economies in the region. Moderate inflation of 7.6 percent in 2009 and a relatively stable political environment compared to neighbouring Andean countries make Colombia attractive as a business partner of future.

Colombia imported about US$ 14049.86 million worth of engineering goods in 2009, down from US$ 16358.89 million recorded in 2008. India's exports of engineering goods to Colombia were to the tune of US$ 120.53 million in 2009, down from US$ 151.51 million in 2008. In 2009, India's share in global engineering imports by Colombia was about 0.86%.

Colombia's global imports of engineering goods have grown at an average rate of over 25% till 2008. The year 2009 saw a southward movement following global recession.

Colombia is a member of Andean Community, the other members being Bolivia, Ecuador and Peru. Argentina, Brazil, Paraguay, Uruguay and Peru are the associate members.

Why Bogotá?

Bogotá is the main economic and industrial center of Colombia. In 2008 the city ranked as the fourth most influential financial center of Latin America. In the period 2003-2006, its commercial GDP grew by 10.3% annually, accounting for 25.3% of GDP national trade.

The city is one of the largest industrial centers in Latin America. Of the 248,000 companies in Bogotá, 78% are linked to service activities, contributing to 76% employment and 79% of GDP. The highest concentrations of industrial establishments are in Puente Aranda, Fontibón, Kennedy, Martyrs, and Barrios Unidos Engativá (in that order). Important businesses include the food industries, chemical, pharmaceutical, textile, publishing and metalworking. The city exports mainly agricultural products (30%), chemicals (10%) and textiles (7%), and imports transportation materials (17%), machinery except electrical (17%) and electrical machinery (14%).
