Dear Sir/Madam,

Seminar on Use of Alternative and Smart Material in Engineering Industry

Friday, 19 July 2019: 10.30 AM: The Assemblage, EEPC India, Kolkata

World is moving towards a regime of lighter, fuel efficient machines which are aesthetically better looking, efficient and does not compromise in durability. These multiple objectives cannot probably be attained by using traditional raw material. The issue of light weighting using aluminum and other alloys was first taken up by auto and aviation industry. Since this initiative saves natural resources both in terms of raw material and fuel, it's finally mature enough to make a significant impact on manufacturers, operators/drivers and the whole planet.

Similarly, smart materials have been in use since 1980's and they have found large number of applications in the field of automobiles, constructions, transport, medical and domestic areas.

Further, with industrial growth the society also faces the menace of industrial wastes. Immediate steps are required to be taken to effectively recycle the waste and use them as alternative material.

Against this backdrop, EEPC India Technology Centre in collaboration with CSIR-AMPRI, Bhopal is organizing a Seminar on Use of Alternative and Smart Material in Engineering Industry on Friday, 19th July, 2019 at 10.30 am at EEPC India Office Premises at Kolkata, followed by Lunch. The registration starts at 10.00 am.

The core theme of the seminar is Educating MSMEs on Alternative and Smart Material to move up the Value Chain for Sustainability.
